In 2016, Amanda left documentaries for scriptwriting. Within one year she had written twelve scripts broadcast by BBC Children's programming, including flagship series "Justin's House". She's also been in five writers rooms for incredible shows like Sesame Street's "The Furchester Hotel".

Within two years she was named one of the Edinburgh Television Festival's "Ones to Watch" and her first full-length comedy script ranked among the top 10% among the thousands of writers who submitted to the BBC for their annual Writers Room competition.

She has just finished writing and script editing/producing for the groundbreaking new BBC2 sketch show "The Amelia Gething Complex", another new episode of the BBC's "Swashbuckle", and several animation scripts for a London-based creative agency.

Her current projects include a brand new 30-minute dark animation pilot called "Supernits", and a 30-minute comedy pilot for a major international broadcaster. She's also writing a musical with Second City alumna Jen Banks and Halle chair Katharine Longworth.

Her sketch, joke, and article work has been seen on NBC/Seeso, Comic Relief, Confused.com, mindfulness sites Elephant Journal and Tiny Buddha, and satirical website Reductress.

She's also contributed to/performed in Richard III: The Reburial, the Funny Women Stage Awards 2016, BBC World Service, and three years of standup at comedy nights across the UK. Amanda also has years of award-winning experience in UK and worldwide documentaries, development, multi-platform, and social media campaigns.

Being the mother of a son with autism, she's especially interested in projects concerning autism.
